

"MAKE THE CONNECTION"

UNSTUCK.

Hey listen, if you've made it to this page, you already have the drive that it takes to accomplish some of your wildest dreams. Nonetheless, let's get real, being driven is one thing, however, knowing what to do with that drive is often the challenge. While many people experience this disconnect, I want to be sure that you walk away from this evaluation with a clear vision of how to connect your drive with the commitment to make your vision a reality.

PHENOMENAL

Before we get started, I'll briefly share with you an example that has personally equipped me with much direction & drive this year.

GOAL

"I want to write my second book."

REASON

"I want this book to help students connect motivation with an attainable motive, so they can experience self-motivated goal achievement."

GREAT

COMMITMENT

"I will write 1 page per day until the book is complete." (practical & measurable)

GOOD

While my commitment connects me to what I need to do daily, my goal and reason gives me the drive to get it done. Motivation from others should only serve as a reminder to keep my goal, reason, & commitment the main thing.

- Lee Junior